Retreat

Captain A. P. Storrs, United States Navy, was born in Owego, New York, on 3 December 1901. A member of the United States Naval Academy class of 1923, he received his flight training at Pensacola, Florida, in 1925. He has had duty aboard the U.S.S. Oklahoma, U.S.S. Langley, and U.S.S. Saratoga, and served as Commanding Officer of the U.S.S. Pelican. He has flown with Fighting Squadron Two and Fighting Squadron Six, and commanded Patrol Squadron Four, Patrol Squadron Fifty-three, and Patrol Wing Eight.

Captain Storrs, in a distinguished career in naval aviation, has pioneered in the development of precision formation flying and of the techniques of carrier aircraft operation. The first months of the war found him engaged in anti-submarine patrol and in escort duty in the North Atlantic. Ordered to the Aleutians as Chief of Staff of the Commander of the Aleutian Sector, he supervised the development of air bases along the Aleutian Chain. In this connection he commanded the naval task unit which took part in the invasion of Attu and planned and supervised the construction of the Naval Air Station on the island. Later he commanded the naval task unit which participated in the occupation of Kiska.

Before being ordered to the Sador he was Commanding Officer of the Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Maryland, the Navy's Aircraft Testing Center.

CRASH

While on maneuvers outside of Bikini Atoll, one of our planes tried to skip waves and buried herself in the Pacific. During rescue attempts we capsized a lifeboat but both pilot and boat crews were saved. Pilot Ens. Gremtzer received his parachute as a crash souvenir. Bos'n's Mate Swalley and Seaman Sweeney received citations for salvage of rescue craft.
